Celebrating one year of births

By MEGAN TROTTER

Infertility Birth Center in Cockeysville is celebrating its one-year mark in business, a year that has seen the clinic bring their children into the world for many couples.

INFERTILITY BIRTH CENTER

In Cockeysville is celebrating its one-year anniversary, marking a year of joy for many couples whose dreams of having a child have come true. The center, which offers a variety of fertility treatments, has already helped numerous couples achieve their family goals.

Local alternative birthing center also gains global attention

By MEGAN TROTTER

Infertility Birth Center in Cockeysville is celebrating its one-year anniversary, marking a year of joy for many couples whose dreams of having a child have come true. The center, which offers a variety of fertility treatments, has already helped numerous couples achieve their family goals.

On May 20, Infertility Birth Center welcomed Sally Goodwin and Robert Miller, whose journey towards parenthood has been a testament to hope and determination. After years of trying to conceive, the couple sought the services of Infertility Birth Center, hoping to make their dreams a reality.

The center’s team, including Dr. Leslie Schumacher, DNP, Crystal Bailey, CNM, and Claire Lamer, CNM, is committed to providing a safe and supportive environment for couples like Sally and Robert. Their dedication to helping others conceive has not gone unnoticed, and the center has seen a significant increase in demand.

Infertility is one of the most common issues couples face when planning for a family. Many couples struggle with the physical and emotional challenges of infertility, and finding a skilled and compassionate team to support them is crucial.

Infertility Birth Center has been a beacon of hope for couples like Sally and Robert, who have found a place where their dreams of parenthood are nurtured and their journeys are valued.

Discussion of Infertility Birth Center's one year anniversary was also held at the clinic. Infertility is a common issue that affects many couples. "About 10 percent of the population experience infertility in their lifetime," said Dr. Sally Goodwin.

"It is a bittersweet moment for us to celebrate one year of helping couples bring their children into the world. It is always a joy to see the smiles on the faces of these couples," said Dr. Robert Miller.

"We are grateful to have had the opportunity to help so many couples achieve their dreams," said Dr. Leslie Schumacher.

The clinic has seen a significant increase in demand in recent years, with more couples turning to alternative birthing centers like Infertility Birth Center for support and guidance.

Infertility Birth Center is one of the few centers in the state that offers work-life balance. "In addition to providing a safe and supportive environment for couples, we also prioritize their well-being and work-life balance," said Dr. Robert Miller.

The center’s team is committed to ensuring that each couple feels supported and valued throughout their journey. "We understand that infertility is a very personal and intimate issue for couples," said Dr. Sally Goodwin.

Infertility Birth Center is committed to helping couples achieve their dreams of parenthood, and they are dedicated to providing a safe and supportive environment for couples like Sally and Robert.

Open house

J&S Construction crew helps in Nashville flood relief

By LAURA GWINN

COOKEVILLE — The J&S Construction crew helped in the relief efforts in the wake of the historic flood in Nashville.

"The J&S crew is dedicated to helping our community in times of need," said a spokesperson for J&S Construction.

J&S Construction's Emergency Response Team was deployed to Nashville to assist with relief efforts in the wake of the flood. The team worked alongside other organizations to provide critical support in the aftermath of the disaster.

"We were honored to be a part of the relief efforts," said Jamie Smith, a crew member.

The J&S Construction crew has a long history of community service, and they are proud to have played a role in the recovery efforts in Nashville.

Open house

Peacetime Planning recently held an open house at its new office at 10 W. Beard St., Suite 200. Interested in its work,来 Autumn Wolden, director of public relations, covered the scene. "The open house was a success," Wolden said.

"We had a great turnout, and we were able to provide information about our services and answer any questions our attendees had," Wolden said.

Peacetime Planning is a non-profit organization that helps communities prepare for peace and conflict resolution. It offers a range of services, including workshops, seminars, and consulting services.

"We are excited to be able to offer these services to our community," Wolden said.

For more information about Peacetime Planning or to schedule a consultation, please visit www.peacetimeplanning.org.